COUNSELORS CONNECTING

The ACT and SAT are standardized tests used for U.S. college admissions, assessing students' readiness for higher education. Both tests are widely accepted at all colleges and universities, and one exam does not hold greater weight than the other. The SAT, from the College Board, focuses on reading, writing, and math, while the ACT, includes English, math, reading, and now an optional science section. Both measure similar academic skills but differ in pacing and structure. The ACT is scored on a scale from 1 to 36, and the SAT is scored on a scale of 400 to 1600. Most students take their first test in the spring of Junior year, allowing time for retakes before college applications. Although some colleges are test-optional, strong ACT or SAT scores can still enhance applications and increase scholarship opportunities. Your Counselor is happy to answer any questions related to entrance exams and the college admissions process!
